Title: CENTRALIZED EMERGENCY NETWORK FOR NAMIBIA

Abstract The invention relates to a centralized emergency response service stems from the ever growing need for quicker, more accurate and reliable responses from emergency service providers to those who need it most. The core of the system is the introduction of geospatial information. The ability to make better and immediate estimations of where an emergency request is made from by triangulating the call using radio towers (which already have an exact known location) and dispatching the service closest to the request because of their known location as well. This new process of streamlining all the technologies for the faster and more reliable responses, which is new in Namibia.
